NO PAVING UNDER THREE MILE LAW

Special Judge Hanna Returns Decision Sustaining Remonstrators in Street Paving Case.

CONSTITUTIONALITY POINT

Was Untouched—Intent of the Law Makers Was Not to Pave City Streets.

The special term of the Rush circuit court during the summer vacation opened this morning with the street paving case which has been in the courts for several months.

Charles T. Hanna of Indianapolis, who was appointed special judge, rendered a decision in the suit, sustaining the objections of the remonstrators and dismissing the petition of the petitioners at their costs. The case will in all probability be appealed to the supreme court.

In his decision Special Judge Hanna said that it was not necessarily a question of the constitutionality of the law as it was the question of the power of the legislature to enact the law and the power of the commissioners to pave with brick under the law. The language of the Three Mile law is to the effect that the road shall be paved by gravel, macadam, or any other like material. The petitioners claimed that brick came under the class of any other material, while the remonstrators believed the contrary and were upheld in their opinion by Judge Hanna.

According to Judge Hanna in his decision the Three Mile law was passed in 1905 and the same legislature passed a Cities and Towns act, which provided for the paving of streets in cities and towns. The language of the law there specified what kind of material to be used and by this it was shown that the legislators did not want for terms in naming the materials to be used in paving.

The road act of this year's legislature, said Judge Hanna in rendering his decision, was the outgrowth of the doubt as to the proper construction to be put on the Three Mile law of 1905. If there was any intent at all that city streets should be paved under this law, it is doubtful. There are many other methods of building roads, which could come under the clause, any other like material, and still exclude brick and other forms of paving streets.

His decision in fact hinged on that

YOUNG MAN DIED IN FAR AWAY TEXAS

Verne McDaniel, a Victim of Typhoid Fever in Panhandle District of Texas.

FATHER WAS AT HIS BEDSIDE

Word was received here Sunday that Vern McDaniel, the twenty-three-year-old son of Thomas McDaniel, living west of this city, died at an early hour Sunday morning in the Panhandle district in Texas. Young McDaniel went there about Christmas time to work on the farm of Senator Newhouse of Decatur county. Death was due to typhoid fever. His father was at his bedside when he died. Deceased was the grandson of the late Leonidas McDaniel. Several brothers and sisters survive.

Review of the Town—Human Interest Tales

Stewart Beale, engineer at the city light and power plant, is a queer character in many particulars. He gets off on stunts and hobbies and plays them for all he's worth. Last week his long suit was bird dogs and female baritones. Stewart has one hobby that is away out of the ordinary. He still uses tallow candles in his bedroom, declaring that the mellow light they throw out is conducive to good, sound sleep.

There is some talk of organizing a fly killing association in Rushville and making a herculean effort to stamp out the pest. At the postoffice today they framed a slate of officers and Theo. Reed will likely be chosen as president.

Greeley Ferguson takes an afternoon siesta daily in the court house yard, on the east side, where the shade is three or four inches deep. Last week he raised a complaint that Custodian Jabez Smith did not make his bed for three days and kept the grass cut short taking away the downy Ostermoor effect for him. He says it is unconstitutional and hard on his constitution.

There are several local boys who have a monument erected to their names of which they can feel justly proud. They are the boys who have been arrested and jailed and while incarcerated carved their names and ages on the stone wall of the jail. Another oddity in that line found in the county jail is the name of Haley Gipe, carved in the floor. Along side of it is a profile likeness of the young prisoner who was sent up from here for the murder of Mrs. Starbuck and her baby.

The farmers of this country had reached the point where they were, as a class, the best read and posted people to be found. But that condition is fast becoming a thing of the past. Why? Oh, there are many reasons. First, it must be considered that a few years ago, they were practically isolated, while today they are omnipresent—so to speak. Many of them have their motor cars; others use traction cars and have the fleetest of horses at their service; then there is the telephone and other modern conveniences that replace the old way of getting information. Fact is, they have as little time to read papers and magazines thoroughly as the busy man of the metropolitan center. They have been making lots of money lately, and you know it requires some time to spend it. In a few years the farmers will not know any more what is going on in this country than any of the rest of us.

Speaking generally, the old bulldozing way of quizzing a witness on the stand and the haranguing among attorneys is passing out and is becoming a lost art—for which we can all return many thanks. Most of the lawyers of the old school depended upon grand stand plays and intimidation to win cases and make a good impression for their client who ignorantly sat by and drank it all in. This was called to mind—and forcibly so—in the Elwell road case heard in the court house Friday and Saturday. Counsel on both sides were very "gentlemanly" with each other and really appeared to be there trying the case on its merits—as all cases should be tried. If one of the old snarling, sharp-tongued, bluffing, blunting, nagging barristers had been on the case when that Englishman took the stand he would have come to grief—and that mighty soon. The fellow knew more about road building than one could find in the university text books—and better still, he possessed the faculty of being able to give a comprehensive exposition of his knowledge in a practical manner.

There is one Rushville physician who never shaves, still he keeps a neat appearance. He goes to the barber shop two or three times a week and has the whiskers on his face taken off with clippers. But never does he allow them to put a razor on his face.

Ernest Foster, the young artist from this county, who has made good in the last few years, was formerly employed in Wolf's photograph gallery here. But no one ever "pictured him" as being the success he is. Can't always tell how far a frog will jump until you poke him with a stick, they do say.

Clifford S. Lee of the Indianapolis Star was here Sunday, the guest of his parents. Besides writing daily feature material for the Star, Mr. Lee writes a number of Sunday feature articles and had a good one Sunday over his signature regarding an old soldier artist who is painting a number of fine canvasses at the Lafayette Home.

At Dr. Sexton's sanitarium they have a large white cat they call Jim Watson. He is a privileged character about the place and a prime favorite with the nurses and the patients brought there. Recently a well known woman was at the sanitarium for treatment and her husband meeting the Hon. James E. Watson—not the feline—down the street, told him of his wife's illness. Mr. Watson said he was grieved to hear of it and accompanied the husband to the sanitarium to say a few cheering words to the woman. After he left the woman was in better spirits for Mr. Watson has a way about him of not only making himself exceedingly congenial, but leaves a good impression everywhere. A short time afterwards one of the nurses came in the room. Seeing the woman lying on the bed smiling, she made a remark about it.

"Yes, I am feeling better today. Jim Watson was just in here, did you know that?"

"No," said the nurse; "where is he now—under the bed?"

Every man who wants work now can get it. The farmers have more work to do right now than they have men to do it. They are looking for men. Of course they do not want men who are afraid of work. But a man who can stand the hot sun on a down-town street corner, can do a good day's work in the field where the breeze can strike him fairly. Go out and help the farmers if you are not otherwise employed and at the same time you are helping yourself.

A certain Rush county farmer, who has made quite a few thousand dollars in the past few years, owns a large farm and is living on easy street, like many another fellow who arrives at that place, has begun to think of dying. And it is not altogether a spiritual thought along that line, but has the marks of temporal anxiety mixed in. He has a son—a lad about sixteen years of age. Calling him to one side he asked of him: "My boy, if I should die, what would you do—keep on farming?"

"Sure I would," the boy promptly replied.

"That's good," said the father. "Now, if you had all my money and the farm and everything, and I was dead, what would be the first thing you would do?"

The boy meditated for a few seconds, then said:

"The first thing I would do, pop, would be to buy an automobile."

"Then, by jove," said the father, "if that's what you intend to do with my money if I die, I had better buy one now and ride around in it a little myself."

And he did buy one right off.

Here's a strange tale and whatever you do don't put the wrong construction on it. A comely little girl—and a Tri Kappa, by the way—was a visitor at the Psi Iota Xi camp a few days ago when a number of young gentlemen were being entertained there. They were all having a good time and for grown-ups really played a bit rough. Now, this particular girl turns up with a broken rib. The injury was caused by her falling on an arm—no, no, not a gentleman's arm—but the arm of a chair.

There are but two saloons left in Rushville, but nearly every "deposed" bartender has found employment in them. The bars have been enlarged and talk about a land office business! Saturday during the afternoon and night they could hardly accommodate the trade. It would be safe to say that the two places took in between seven and eight hundred dollars. Saturday night we saw the first evidence of the much talked about "suit case" brigade. A number of fellows were seen hustling off to the late traction cars carrying suit cases and grips filled with bottled beer.

A lot of people are talking horse in Rushville these days and it reminds one of the golden days around here when Rush county had about thirty small race tracks and the farmers and business men raised fast horses like they do chickens now. Everybody had a promising youngster then—even school teachers and bartenders. But the panic came and oh you financial crash! Race horses were worthless. Couldn't work them and it cost the last penny to feed them. But the business has revived and not for years has there been so many good horses around here.

Some folks thing the antics of the Katzenjammer Kids as seen in the comic supplements are unreal and fictitious. But of course those folks are the ones who have no children. Here is a little stunt that originated in the fertile minds of three boys last week, none of whom have passed the waist and blouse stage of life. They are the three sons of Mrs. Edna Dagler—two are twins and one isn't—he's just another boy. Mrs. Dagler prides herself on raising a lot of fine chickens each year, but she won't this year. The three disciples of Peck caught about fifty small chicklets last week and because they didn't like their looks painted all of them red—using a bucket of barn paint thoughtlessly left around the premises. Then they pitched the poor, surprised fowls into a pool of water to see if they could swim. Most of them died a horrible death and the three boys, well—they were given a coat of red, but not with paint—the t was left off—it was caused by pain.

A while back, there was much discussion and anxiety among some of the neighbors in the Bankert neighborhood, south of this city. Sadie Smay, the domestic employed at the Bankert home, who was one of the principal witnesses in the Bankert murder case, has been missing for several months. All sorts of stories were rife. But all without foundation. When inquisitive neighbors asked her whereabouts they got little information in return for their trouble. A news item appeared in the Indianapolis Star last week stating that Sadie Smay, a domestic working in North Delaware street, had been taken ill and was removed to a hospital.

Will Adams, who keeps a cigar stand in the Conroy restaurant, sports a ring with a large stone in it that either cost three hundred dollars or seventy-five cents.

Wow! We are to hear some echoes from the Main street paving case. Today there was all sorts of stories afloat about indictments and prosecutions and all that sort of thing. Some threaten to touch off the sky rockets in a few days.

Probably there is no city in the State where the young men of a church conduct any enterprise and make as much as the young Catholic men do here with their annual carnival. They clear between five and seven hundred dollars each season. This year they are planning to make it bigger, greater and grander than ever and several high class outside attractions will be secured. It will be given four nights, beginning Tuesday night, July 27.

On page three of the Daily Republican today is found a feature story on "That Dreaded Third Degree," setting forth, in detail, the terrible inquisitions of the police departments of some of the larger cities.

Carl Morris, the phenomenal baritone singer, who left Rush county but a few short years ago, and who has reached the top notch with concert singers in New York City, will be in Rushville in three weeks to visit old friends and relatives. His grandmother lives in North Jackson street and an aunt teaches school here in the Havens building.

Curt Evans, who closed his saloon last week, says he is going to take a much needed vacation. For eleven years—since he has made Rushville his home—he never laid off from work but four days in all that time. During the first few years of his residence here he worked at a wood-working factory. Curt says he is going to get a rocking chair and sit on his front veranda in Harrison street for four weeks. If anyone finds him "up-town" during that time, he says he will forfeit a five-dollar bill. After his piazza vacation he will get out and run for city clerk on the Democratic ticket.

P. A. Miller has a caliope and fair ground attachment on his motor car, which he uses to warn people to get out of his way. It frightens people half out of their wits and some there are who say they would rather be run down than have the thing "blown" at them.

Boston ivy has been planted around the Main Street Christian church, and in a few years the edifice will be one of the most beautiful buildings in the city. Nearly all the fine churches in the larger cities have ivy creeping about them. It takes away the blank, stony look, adds life to the picture and brings out the architectural beauties of the building.

In West Seventh street there lives a five-year-old boy who has always bore evidence since babyhood of being exceptionally bright. His mental faculties were abnormal and a few days ago when he showed signs of a mental weakness the parents became alarmed and called in a physician. It is the opinion of some that the boy has two brains.

Will Kelly, the demented young man in jail will be taken by Sheriff King to the East Haven asylum at Richmond tomorrow for treatment. He will be taken in Allen Hinchman's motor car. Joseph Cowing and wife will accompany J. T. Arbuckle and wife in another machine. Kelly is opposed to going to the asylum and declares he is of sound mind. In event Kelly raises a disturbance, it is planned to have Arbuckle and Trustee Cowing close at hand.

GOLD THIEF IS CAUGHT AT LAST

Bold Operator Who Plundered Dentists' Offices Over Indiana, is Now in the Toils.

WAS IN RUSHVILLE LAST YEAR

Robbed Dr. Sparks' Office of $25 Worth of Gold—Rushville Woman Identifies Thief.

Rushville and Shelbyville united Sunday in weaving a chain of circumstantial evidence that promises to possess many entanglements for A. S. Johnson of St. Louis, Mo., claiming to be a traveling representative for a barber supply company, says the Shelbyville Morning News. Johnson is held in jail pending a hearing in Justice E. S. VanCleave's court today on a charge of larceny, Dr. F. G. Blackburn, the prosecuting witness, claiming Johnson robbed his dental office a year ago. His allegations are based on partial and complete identification established Sunday by Ernest Montgomery, colored, and Ernest Metcalf, of this city, and Mrs. Hatfield, keeper of a boarding house in Rushville.

Johnson was taciturn Sunday, excepting at times, when the sweating by Chief Marsh and Officer James Jackson and Constable Sammons grew unusually severe, he shook off his nonchalance and became exceedingly loquacious.

Ernest Montgomery, who saw a thief one year ago as he was leaving Dr. Blackburn's office at the noon hour, several other dental offices having been robbed of gold plates, scales, and silver, is emphatic in his declaration Johnson is the same fellow. He saw Johnson enter the stairway leading to the dentist's office at six o'clock Sunday morning. Constable Dick Sammons was called and made a hurried search of the hallway, finding every door locked. The officer, leaving the halls, stopped in front of the Jones drug store, thinking the fellow was on the street. His vigilance was rewarded sooner than he expected for a form appeared at the stairway and almost as quickly disappeared. Sammons sprang up toward the entrance, finding the stranger sitting on the step holding his head. He said he was very ill and had been using the closet.

NEW MINISTER IN HIS FIRST SERMON

Rev. E. C. Myers of the Missionary Baptist Church Made Good Impression.

GREETED BY LARGE AUDIENCE

A large and appreciative audience greeted Rev. E. C. Myers, the new minister of the Missionary Baptist church at the first of a series of union meetings to be held every Sunday evening by the churches of the city during the months of July and August. Rev. Myers spoke at the St. Paul's M. E. church last night and chose for his subject "Knowing God."

He preached a very pleasing sermon and one that was not without its good impressions. He brought out clearly the point that to know God, you must serve him or in the language of the common people, you never know a man until you work for him.

WILL VISIT OLD ERIN

Irish Home Going Pilgrimage to Mother Land Planned.

LEAGUE HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

Officers Elected at a Meeting Held in Washington—Information About Ireland and Its Industries to Be Gathered—Much Interest Shown in the Movement.

The intended Irish home going pilgrimage, which was first proposed by Francis J. Kilkenny and which has been discussed by Irishmen all over the United States for several months past, was made a certainty at Carroll Institute hall in Washington the other night. A permanent organization was formed, and plans were outlined for the pilgrimage, which will be made in 1910.

The organization is to be known as the Irish Home Going Pilgrimage league. Its purpose is to gather all information regarding events in Ireland next summer and to arrange rates on the transatlantic steamship lines. Mr. Kilkenny and Dr. P. J. Lennox were appointed to visit Ireland this summer and prepare the way to next year's pilgrimage.

Since Mr. Kilkenny began stirring up interest in the home going movement he has been swamped by correspondence, and it was found necessary to have a regular organization to bear the expenses of the movement. The membership fee is $1, the fund obtained from the dues to be expended for running expenses. Headquarters will be opened in Washington, and literature will be prepared and sent out all over America and Canada. The officers chosen are the following:

President general, Francis J. Kilkenny; first vice president general, P. J. Moran; third vice president general, John J. Coughlin; fourth vice president general, P. J. Haltigan; fifth vice president general, Representative T. T. Ansberry of Ohio; general treasurer, William F. Downey; general secretary, Joseph D. Sullivan.

In outlining the general plan for the pilgrimage Mr. Kilkenny said:

"Few people realize today the changes wrought in Ireland for the betterment and uplifting of its people. This is due in large measure to the reform legislation generally, and especially to the relief given the tenants in Ireland through the land bill of 1903, enabling them to own their own farms. The people of Ireland are now improving their holdings without fear of being taxed by the landlords for improvements."

"The main idea underlying the home going to Ireland movements is to give the visitors an opportunity for observing conditions as they really exist in Ireland. Much has been written and much will be written of Ireland's poverty and Ireland's riches, but these descriptions are not half as vivid or impressive as the actual sight of the conditions themselves.

"This movement therefore offers an opportunity to the sons and daughters of Erin to return to the scenes of their childhood, to give a word of cheer where needed and to demonstrate to those who still remain to preserve the old traditions that we are all interested in the land of our forefathers, in its people and in the preservation of its natural beauty. One striking fact comes out in the official statistics, and that is that the total emigration of the Irish people from May 1, 1851, when the enumeration was commenced, to Dec. 31, 1908, practically equals the present population of the country, being more than 4,000,000."

After further review of conditions Mr. Kilkenny said:

"The mercantile mind of Ireland must be awakened. The Irish merchant and business man must be won over to the point of view of their own real interests. Representative Irish Americans can do much to encourage commercial relations with this country. American capital can be profitably invested in Irish factories and Irish stores. Irish linens, lace, woollens, tweeds, frieze and kindred industries can be easily developed to a high state of efficiency."

"Ireland offers to the manufacturer many attractive inducements for profitable returns on capital invested. Not only is the capital of Irish Americans needed, but their skill and experience in the use of modern methods and devices will prove to be of invaluable service in the industrial awakening which is now just beginning to dawn in the 'old land.'"—Washington Star.

COMPROMISE IS TO BE THE THING

How Tariff Bill Conferees Expect to Get Together.

BOTH TO MAKE CONCESSIONS

It is Only by Such Mutual Exchanges

of Advantages That the Senate and the House Hope to Arrive at a Definite Conclusion of the Matter Which Has Been So Long Under Discussion—Both Sides Hopeful of Friendly Disposition of the Measure.

Washington, July 12.—The task with which for four months both houses of congress have wrestled—making a tariff law that will most nearly meet the wishes of the people and at the same time raise sufficient revenue for the expenses of the government—has, now reached the conference stage. Eleven men—five Republican senators and six Republican representatives—have shouldered the responsibility of evolving from the two tariff bills passed by the senate and house a law that will be acceptable not only to both houses of congress, but also to the president, and above all to the mass of the people.

While the conferees from both houses desire to have retained in the bill the schedules as approved by their respective branches, none realize better than they that they must make concessions. Their present determination not to yield will give way to a more conciliatory attitude as the conference wears on.

The senate made 847 changes, many of them merely verbal, in the tariff bill, as it passed the house. Members of the house claim the latter's measure comes closer to answering the public demand for a "revision downward" than does the senate bill. Whether it would provide all the revenue needed to run the government is a question. The fight hinges upon the number of changes made by the senate the house conferees can be induced to accept.

Upon the one hand Senator Aldrich will be found contending for the higher, revenue-raising tariff. On the other will be found Representative Seno Payne, leading the house forces in fighting for lower duties.

Senator Aldrich reiterates his statement that the senate bill, if enacted into law, would not impose additional burdens upon the consumer. "Isolated cases of increases of rates are taken and the entire bill condemned because of these," said Mr. Aldrich.

General T. S. Sharretts, the veteran tariff expert, who has been a member of the board of general appraisers in New York for many years, is authority for the statement that the senate bill will show a 2 per cent reduction from the rates of the Dingley law and a very material reduction from the house rates. General Sharretts, who is a Democrat, is assisting the conference committee in its deliberations. He performed the same office for the Democrats when the Wilson bill was in conference.

This viewpoint is not shared by Representative Payne, who said that the rates of the house bill, judged from the standpoint of the interest of the general public, are materially lower than those of the senate bill. The conferees hope to conclude their work by the end of next week, holding lengthy sessions daily and extending them late into the evenings. In the meantime both houses will mark time, holding sessions every three days. Leaders in both houses are hopeful of finally disposing of the tariff before the end of the present month.

PROF. SIMON NEWCOMB DEAD AT WASHINGTON

One of the World's Most Noted Scientists.

Washington, July 12.—The famous astronomer, mathematician and world traveler, Professor Simon Newcomb, who died at his home in this city early Sunday at the age of seventy-four years, will be buried with military honors in Arlington cemetery next Wednesday.

High officials of the government will attend and the honorary pallbearers will include many prominent men in public life. The body is lying in state today at the family residence, and has been viewed by Washingtonians, who have regarded him as one of the world's greatest scientists.

Prof. Newcomb is survived by his wife, a daughter of the late Dr. Hassler, surgeon in the United States navy, and three daughters, Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee of Washington; Mrs. Francis Wilson of New York, and Mrs. Edward Whitney of New York.

During his distinguished career Prof. Newcomb had been the recipient of many honors from leading scientific societies and from royalty. He was a member of the Institute of France, the Royal Astronomical Society of Great Britain, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. During his service with the United States government he conducted a number of parties to foreign lands to observe eclipses. He published the tables of the motions of the stars, the planets and the moon, now used by astronomers in their computations and which are the basis of the navigation of the vessels of the world.

His astronomical researches covered more than 300 papers and a long list of books on astronomy, mathematics and political economy. Some of these are text-books, while others are exhaustive studies of subjects. His first elaborate paper, "Secular Variations and Mutual Relations of the Orbits of the Asteroids," won him international fame.

Prof. Newcomb held many important posts, including that of professor of mathematics at Johns Hopkins university. He held the degree of LL.D. from Yale, Harvard, Columbia, George Washington and other universities.

He first entered the United States navy as a professor of mathematics in 1861, after his graduation from the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard. He was retired with the rank of rear admiral in 1897.

BOLIVIAN ARE ALL STIRRED UP

Fury Over Decision In Boundary Dispute Finds Vent.

MAY LEAD TO SERIOUS TROUBLE

The Argentine Government's Silence in the Face of Bolivian Protests Over the Award of President Alcora in the Boundary Dispute Is Regarded as Ominous—Bolivians Vent Their Feelings by Mobbing Argentine Legation and Stoning Portrait of the President of Argentina.

La Paz, Bolivia, July 12.—Riot reigned in La Paz last night. The people swarmed into the streets and did much damage. The electric light wires were cut and pillaging was begun on all sides. Shots were heard in every direction. The situation for foreigners, especially Peruvians and Argentine residents, is extremely serious.

The guards protecting the Peruvian and Argentine legations were suddenly withdrawn for some unknown reason. When this became known street mobs renewed their attacks on the legations, causing serious damage.

The Argentine minister, Senor Fonseca, and his wife had a narrow escape from injury. They made their way out of the legation and ran eight blocks, finally seeking protection in the home of the president of Bolivia.

No explanation has been made as to why the strict measures ordered by the authorities at the first sign of trouble have not been enforced. Manifestations have been numerous in public places, and at one meeting a portrait of Figueroa Alcorta, president of Argentina, whose unpopular award in the boundary dispute started the trouble, was placed head downward on a pole and stoned to pieces.

It is reported here that considerable excitement prevails at Lima and Buenos Ayres, and the Argentine government's silence in the face of Bolivian protests is regarded as ominous.

The Dreaded Third Degree

Power of the "Sweating" Process of Extracting Confessions From Criminal Suspects as Depicted in the Elsie Sigel Murder. :: ::

By FREDERICK R. TOOMBS.

WHY do so many criminal suspects confess? Why did the sneaking, secretive, degenerate Chinese fantan player Chong Sing recently confess to being an accessory to the shocking murder of Elsie Sigel, the pretty young New York mission worker?

The answer to these questions, prompted by the slaying of the granddaughter of General Franz Sigel and the flight of the Chinese betrayer of white women, Leon Ling, alias William L. Leon, suggests other queries:

Do the police authorities prove that they should be allowed to break the law in putting prisoners through "the third degree?"

Does the "third degree," or "sweating" process of extracting confessions, produce evidence of a trustworthy nature?

Should legislatures exact severe penalties against the practice of leading (forcing) prisoners to confess before trial?

More confessions by criminal suspects are obtained by the use of the third degree system of examination by police officials than by any other means. This system, originally known as "sweating," is supposed to consist of subjecting prisoners to continuous questioning as to the crime with which they are believed to be connected. The answers are compared by the detectives or other police officials, and after, say, hours of rigid cross questioning, during which the accused becomes exhausted mentally and physically, the vital questions first asked are repeated in a changed form. The answers to the new queries are compared minutely with the answers to the questions in their original form. When contradictions or even slightest discrepancies are discovered the bony fingers of the law begin to tighten their fatal clutch. The contradictions give the relentless examiners a hold on the prisoner. He tries to explain and often entangles himself more seriously. Wearied and forlorn, quaking with fear, he will in many cases break down utterly, plead for mercy and divulge the sordid details of a brutal felony which he has witnessed or committed.

As I before stated, that is what the third degree is supposed to be, assisted by the exhibit at an opportune moment of a knife or pistol used in the crime or a bloody garment (in a murder case) or a photograph of the slain person. These exhibits are well calculated to break the nerve of the accused, to make him "come through"—that is, tell the whole story if he knows it to tell.

But it is the fact that prisoners—innocent persons—have been forced to confess to crimes that they never committed and have been forced to describe in detail the execution of crimes that they never saw committed which has raised a national protest against the use of the third degree. While the process as already described may be harsh when applied even to a person of strong mind, yet in a large number of cases the results obtained would seem to justify the police were it not for the unconstitutionality of the procedure. Unfortunately for accused persons, however, there is no one so zealous in the cause of civic purity as an unbribed police officer. When you do not divide the swag or have no swag to divide, being innocent, you must expect to get scanty consideration. For this and other reasons (anxiety of police to convict, etc.) abuses have crept into the application of the third degree, a system which in its inception was comparatively simple.

In the case of Chong Sing, the Sigel accomplice, the police were at first at a loss as to how to proceed because of the well known secretiveness of the Chinese. Hour after hour he was questioned, and his reply was a smirking smile, "I no can say what I don't know." But when a thick set, red faced sleuth pounded the table and shouted, "You killed Elsie Sigel, d—n you, because we got Leon Ling, and he says you killed her, and the tongs say they'll shoot you if you ever get out of jail!" the smirking smile disappeared. Chong Sing begins to think in his crooked, devious, oriental way. Pretty soon Leon Ling, a fugitive sought in 20,000 American cities and towns, or sixty hours the lad threw up his hands and cried out hysterically: "I did it! I did it! For God's sake let me sleep!"

He slept for about a day. When he awoke he gave all the details of the deed.

Harry Orchard, the man who murdered friend and foe alike for small sums of money, confessed at the Hayward trial in Boise City to over twenty felonies. The famous foe of the Molly Maguires, Detective McParland, was responsible for much of Orchard's confession—that is, McParland made Orchard go through with the whole story of his atrocities when his inclination at first was to tell but a fragmentary part. McParland used another branch of the third degree system. He threw the fear of Almighty God into Orchard. He talked to him for hours about the tortures of hell fires. He made Orchard sob convulsively because he would never see his wife and little child again, both of whom he had wantonly deserted and forgotten years before. In his authenticated confession Orchard said:

"My mind was in an awful condition. I was questioning one of the detectives grabbed the accused by his coat collar and jerked him upon his feet.

"Are you going to open up or ain't you?" snarled the officer.

"I've told you fifty times I don't know anything," was the weary reply.

"Take that, then!" snapped the detective, lunging forward and striking the accused violently in the pit of the stomach. The little bookkeeper dropped to the floor, gasping for breath, his face distorted in pain. The detective jerked him to his feet and sat him violently in a chair. The prisoner faintly. About fifteen minutes later, after the bookkeeper came to, he made a confession of guilt which on the trial was shown conclusively to be false.

In Charles Klein's new play, "The Third Degree," at the Hudson theater, New York, the story shows how the repeated questionings and suggestions of the police captain, Clinton, impress on the mind of the bewildered, half drunk prisoner, Howard Jeffries, Jr., the idea that, after all, he really did murder his friend Robert Underwood. Later Captain Clinton is shown by Dr. Bernstein to have hypnotic powers.

The playwright has not overdrawn the possibilities of the situation. Physicians, learned, cold blooded judges in high courts, admit the ability of strong minds to overcome weaker mentality and produce certain desired results through persevering persecution, as in the third degree process.

Of course the law does not approve of the methods used in some of the cases before mentioned. Their use, however, is usually safe because the prisoner has no witnesses present when he is examined. If he complains of his treatment it will be a case of his word against that of three or four or five detectives, as the case may be. He probably has not had as yet an opportunity to engage a lawyer, or if he has the lawyer will probably not be allowed to see his client until the "sweating" period is over. The police of many cities frequently follow this practice, which is a clear violation of the constitutional provision that "the accused shall * * * have the assistance of counsel." And the courts hold (see People ex. rel. versus Risely, volume 13; Abbott's New Cases, page 186) that a person in jail has the right to the protection of counsel even before indictment. Further, the extreme of the third degree is a violation of the constitutional regulation that "no person shall * * * be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

Confessions obtained through promises of immunity from persons in authority are not valid in the law, but frequently admissions of guilt are obtained through promises of immunity made by private persons known by the prisoner to have influence with the prosecuting authorities, merely a mode of evading the law. Harry Orchard secured immunity because of his confession. It is generally believed.

Confessions secured through duress or force are invalid, provided the accused can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the court that improper means were used. The burden of proof (unfortunately for innocent victims of the third degree) to show that an inducement has been held out or improper influence used to exact a confession is on the prisoner. (So held in English and American cases.) Thus the law makes it difficult to retract or invalidate a confession. But facts which explain or qualify a confession may be adduced in evidence.

becomes a liar. Pretty soon Chong Sing tells the wretched story of Leon Ling and the missionary girl who was drugged, strangled, mutilated with acid and thrown into a trunk. Pretty soon Chong Sing begins to tell how he himself, after witnessing the crime through a keyhole (so he claims), aids in strapping the trunk, aids in the flight of Leon Ling.

There we have one form of abuse of police power—causing the accused to give evidence against himself. "We have to do these things in order to convict and so further the ends of justice," say the police of a score of cities.

A young lad was arrested in Camden, N. J., charged with the murder of a young girl. He was kept awake for sixty hours and pled continually with questions about the crime. When questioners became tired fresh assistants continued the work. At the end tion about this time, I felt that I did not want to live, and I was afraid to die. I would not go through such remorse and torment again for all the world. I felt that the only thing to do was to confess all and pray God for forgiveness."

The head bookkeeper of a construction company doing business in Pennsylvania was arrested as involved in certain gross frauds in public contracts in a large Pennsylvania city. Three detectives took him into a room in the police station and questioned him for about seven hours. Not getting the information desired, they suddenly seized the bookkeeper, who was of slight physical strength, handcuffed him and dragged him roughly down two flights of stairs, where he was photographed for the rogues' gallery ("mugged"). As roughly was he dragged upstairs again. After an hour's

The newspapers of New York are serving notice upon their patrons that the price of papers per copy will be advanced. The Sunday editions will sell at seven cents instead of five cents as at present, while the regular daily editions will sell at five cents instead of three. The reason given for this advance is the fact the cost of white paper and other materials have advanced. The same conditions prevail here in Indiana.

acted like a good business man in increasing revenue, if it is not possible to cut down expenditures.

Senator Aldrich is a shrewd financier, a man of great business ability. He "thinks" the revenue laws without the corporation tax will produce enough money to make both ends meet, "if" there is a general revival of business. He may be right, but it is much better to be on the safe side and not trust too much to contingencies. In any event he can scarcely show by figures where the revised laws can produce anything like an additional hundred million, and that amount is necessary if the country is to be run in the future on Republican principles and in Republican ways. In due time the President will receive full credit for his suggestions which will enable the country to get along without a bond issue in time of peace.

The promoters of the national endurance contest for motor cycles, to be run between Cleveland and Indianapolis, August 10th and 11th, were here today in a monster seven-passenger Thomas automobile, blazing the way for the trip. Over one hundred motor cycles have been entered and a very spectacular contest is expected.

Rushville is in the path of the motorists and they will pass through here about three o'clock on the afternoon of August 11th. The mayor has granted them permission to use the streets, since they will no doubt exceed the speed limit. The contestants will come in on Second street, up Buena Vista avenue, and out Third street to their destination, Indianapolis. They request that the streets be cleared about this time to avoid all accidents.

BASEBALL AT NIGHT.

Trial Game Played at Cincinnati Seems to Be a Success.

Baseball by electric light had a thorough trial at National League park in Cincinnati the other night, and it seems to be a success. The infield and outfield were brilliantly illuminated by a battery of five mammoth lights installed by the inventor of the system, George A. Cahill of Holyoke, Mass., and flooded the field, making it almost as light as day. The game was played between teams representing the Elks' lodges of Cincinnati and Newport, Ky., and was fast in all departments. The players handled hard infield hits with apparently as much certainty and ease as if they had been playing in the glare of noonday. What little difficulty there was experienced in judging balls fell to the outfielders, and these players missed but two out of a possible fourteen hits to the outfield during the seven innings played.

President Garry Herrmann of the Cincinnati Reds said after witnessing the game:

"Night baseball has come to stay. It needs some little further development, but with proper lighting conditions—conditions better than this experiment provided—will see the night sport immensely popular."

Manager Clark Griffith of the Reds said:

"I don't believe that night baseball is destined to rival the daylight article, but I will say that I am much surprised at the ease with which the game was played tonight. Under improved lighting it will grow more popular."

A crowd of more than 4,500 persons saw the game.

The scheme was a pronounced success, although the big league players who witnessed the contest expressed the opinion that there would have to be further improvement in the system of lighting before championship games may be played.

TO BREED GULLS.

Experiment to Be Made at Bronx Park, New York.

C. William Beebe, curator of ornithology of the New York Zoological society, will make the experiment of breeding herring gulls in Bronx park, New York. There is a large colony of these birds on the group known as Four Brothers islands, in Lake Champlain, the owner of which, Edward Hatch, Jr., has given fifteen young gulls to the society.

It was necessary to secure the permission of State Game Commissioner Whipple before the birds could be shipped, for the islands are maintained by Mr. Hatch as a bird refuge, with a warden in charge, but this permission has been obtained, and an interesting exhibit will be thereby added to the attractions of the Bronx zoo.

Great Amphitheater For Chicago.

The largest convention hall in America is planned for Chicago, according to Harlow N. Higinbotham, president of the World's Columbian exposition of 1893. The building will be known as the Amphitheater. It will have a seating capacity of 45,000. It will be elliptical and, with slight modifications, a reproduction of the Flavian amphitheater in Rome.

Fund For Great Indian Statue.

The Trenton (N. J.) Red Men recently voted affirmatively on the proposition for the entire order to give 2 cents a man as the first installment for the mammoth statue of an American Indian in bronze to be placed at the entrance to New York harbor. High officials said it was certain the national conclave would ratify this action that 500,000 men contribute.

TOOK JABE DOWN TO OLD HOME PLACE

A Jolly Crowd of "Pioneers" Visit Custodian Smith's Birthplace in Decatur County.

HATS OFF TO COURT HOUSE

One of the finest court houses in Indiana is that at Rushville, says the Greensburg News. At the time it was built, the public square around it was rather a dilapidated looking place, old and poorly kept buildings predominating. It was this appearance that caused the remark from a visitor there "that the fine building with poor surroundings, looked to him like a tramp with a silk plug hat on."

The popular custodian of that court house, Uncle Jabez Smith, is one of the best known and best liked men in Rush county. He was born in Decatur county on the farm now owned by John E. Robbins, so long ago that the memory of man cannot recall the date. Mr. Smith was here Friday in company with Willard Amos, ex-Sheriff "Buck" Tompkins, and ex-Auditor Albert Winship, in the latter's automobile and drove down to the old place to see the kind of soil that produced such large sized fine looking old gentlemen as Uncle Jabez Smith. It was a jolly crowd and they were having a deal good time while calling on old friends here.

AMUSEMENTS

There will be a complete change of program at the Palace theater tonight. The new manager, E. C. Clifford has taken possession with the idea of giving the public of Rushville the latest, up-to-date and high class brand of amusement that has heretofore been presented by Mr. Meredith, the former manager.

"A Tooted Hankshaw" and "New Pain Killer" are the titles to be shown tonight at the Vaudet. Both are said to be excellent pictures, depicting a story of much interest. Mrs. Blanche Wolverton will sing the illustrated song, "It's Great to be a Soldier Man."

"The Land of the Midnight Sun," is the title of the film to be shown tonight at the Star-Grand theatre. The photographs for this film were taken upon a ship plowing through the ice between Norway and Spitzbergen, and gives vivid scenes in the arctic regions. Three immense icebergs are shown which were passed by the ship, and one of them being right in the track of the ship, it had to pass around it, and it did so nearby as it was safe to do so. Then beautiful views are given of the midnight sun—that is at midnight the sun passes just below the horizon for a short time and then comes up again to shine for full twenty-four hours. The ship approaches the bleak, very mountainous and dismal shores of Spitzbergen, an island in the far North, and these are shown about a mile or so distant. Not many people have the opportunity or the money to take a trip to the arctic regions, and when the scenes of the frozen North are literally picked up and brought to your very door, so to speak, it surely pays to meet it part way by going to the Star-Grand theatre. This film will prove very interesting to those who delight to get glimpses of distant lands. The other film subject is "Daunted by his First Love," and the title of the illustrated song is "My Own United States."

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

The Man
From Brodney'sBy GEORGE BARR
M'CUTCHEONCopyright, 1908, by Dodd, Mead
& Co.CHAPTER VI.
THE CHATEAU.

THE road to the chateau took its devious way through the little town out into the green foothill beyond. Two lumbering wooden wheeled carts, none too clean,
each drawn by four perspiring men,
served as conveyances by which the arrivals were to make the journey to their new home.

Lady Deppingham's pert little nose
lifted itself in disgust as she was joggled through the town behind the grunting substitutes for horseflesh. She sat beside her husband in the foremost cart. Mr. Bowles, very tired, but quite resplendent, walked dutiful-

"Most of the islanders have got three or four wives already."

ly beside one wheel; Mr. Saunders took his post at the other. The servants came along behind in the second cart. Far ahead, like hounds in full cry, toiled the unwilling luggage bearers. From the windows and doorways of every house, from the bazaars and cafes, from the side streets and mosque approaches, the gaze of the sullen populace fastened itself upon the little procession. The town seemed ominously silent.

At last they came to the end of the sunlit street and plunged into the shady road that ascended the slope
through what seemed to be an absolutely unbroken though gorgeous juncle. The cool green depths looked most alluring to the sun baked travelers.
They could almost imagine that they heard the dripping of fountains, the gurgling of rivulets, so like paradise was the prospect ahead. Lady Agnes could not restrain her cries of delighted amazement.

"It's like this all over the island,
your ladyship," volunteered Mr.
Bowles, mopping his brow in a most unmilitary way, "except at the mines and back there in the town."

"Where are the mines?" asked Deppingham.

"The company's biggest mines are seven or eight miles eastward as the crow flies, quite at the other side of the island. It's very rocky over there, and there's no place for a landing from the sea. Everything is brought overland to Ararat and placed in the vaults of the bank. Four times a year the rubies and sapphires are shipped to the brokers in London and Paris and Vienna. It's quite a neat and regular arrangement, sir."

"But I should think the confounded natives would steal everything they got their hands on."

"What would be the use, sir? They couldn't dispose of a single gem on the island, and nothing is taken away from here except in the company's chests.
Besides, my lord, these people are not thieves. They may kill people occasionally, but they are quite honest, believe me. And, in any event, are they not a part of the great corporation? They have their share in the working of the mines and in the profits. Mr.
Wyckholme and Mr. Skaggs were honest with them, and they have been just as honest in return."

"I should think they'd be terribly tempted," said Lady Agnes. "They look so wretchedly poor."

"My lady," said Bowles, "there are but four poor men on the island—myself and the three Englishmen who operate the bank. There isn't a poor man, woman or child among the natives. This is truly a land of rich men. The superintendent of the mines is a white man—a German—and the three foremen are Boers. They work on shares, just as the natives do, and save even more, I think. The clerical force is entirely native. There were but ten white men here before you came, including two Greeks. Being part owners, the natives have decided that four hours constitute a day's work. They pay themselves accordingly, as it were. No one works after midday, sir."

"I say, wouldn't this be a paradise
for the English workingman?" said Deppingham. "That's the kind of day's labor they'd like. Do you mean to say that these fellows trudge eight miles to work every morning and back again at noon?"

"Certainly not, sir. They ride their thoroughbred horses to work and ride
them back again."

"You take my breath away," said the other, lapsing into a stunned silence.

The road had become so steep and laborious by this time that Bowles
was very glad to forego the pleasure of talking. He fell back with Mr.
Saunders and proceeded to give the inquisitive lawyer's clerk all the late news of the island.

The inhabitants of Japan had been prompt to protect themselves in a legal sense. They had engaged the services of eminent solicitors in London, who were to represent them in the final settlement of the estate. London was to be the battleground in the coming conflict. A committee of three had journeyed to England to put the matter in the hands of these lawyers and were now returning to the island with a representative of the firm, who was coming out to stand guard, so to speak. Von Blitz, the German superintendent, was the master mind in the native contingent. The absent committee was composed of Ben Adi, Ab-dallah Ben Sabbat and Rasulu, the Ararat lawyer. They were truly wise men from the east—old, shrewd, crafty
and begotten of Mohammed.

The mines continued to be operated as usual pending the arrival of the executors' representative, who, as we know, was now on the ground in the person of Thomas Saunders. The fact that he also served as legal adviser to Lady Deppingham was not of sufficient moment to disturb the arrangements on either side.

As for the American heir, Robert Browne, he had not yet arrived. He was coming by steamer from the west, according to report, and was probably
on the Boswell, Sumatra to Madagascar, due off Ararat in two or three days.

"The islanders," said Mr. Bowles,
lighting a cigarette, "it looks to me,
have all the best of the situation. They get the property whether they marry
or not, while the original beneficiaries have to marry each other or get off the island at the end of the year. Most of the islanders have got three or four wives already."

"You mean to say that they can have as many wives as they choose?"
demanded Saunders, wrinkling his brow.

"Yes, just so long as they don't chose anybody else's."

"My word!"

"Eh?" queried Bowles, arousing himself.

"I didn't say anything," retorted
Saunders, looking up into the treetops.

Standing out against the sky fully a mile ahead was the home to which they were going. The chateau, beautiful as a picture, lifted itself like a dream castle above all that was earthly and sordid. It smiled down from its lofty terrace and glistened in the sunset glow like the jewel that had been its godmother.

According to its own records, the chateau, fashioned quite closely after a famous structure in France, was designed and built by La Marche, the ill fated French architect who was lost
at sea in the wreck of the Vendome.
Three years and more than £700,000—
to make it seem more prodigious, nearly 18,000,000 francs—were consumed in its building.

Apartments fit for a king abounded.
Suits which took one back to the luxuries of Marie Antoinette were common. Banquet halls, ballrooms, reception halls, a chapel and even a crypt were to be found if one undertook a voyage of discovery.

Lord and Lady Deppingham, being first in the field, at once proceeded to settle themselves in the choicest rooms
—a Henry VI. suit, which looked out on the sea and the town as well. It is said that Wyckholme slept there twice, while Skaggs looked in perhaps half a dozen times—when he was lost in the building and trying to find his way back to familiar haunts.

There was not a sign of a servant
about the house or grounds. The men whom Bowles had engaged carried the luggage to the rooms which Lady Dep-

Summer Hair Dressing.

The disagreeable and repulsive odors that come from the hair in summer are caused by dandruff.

Dandruff is caused by microbes which are hard to kill, but which can be killed by Parisian Sage, the quick acting, money-back hair tonic.

Dandruff can never be cured until the small, aggravating and indomitable dandruff germ is conquered and destroyed, thanks to the great scientists and dermatologist who gave to the world Parisian Sage, the only real dandruff cure and hair grower
the world has ever known.

If you have dandruff, Parisian Sage will cure you in two weeks, or your money back.

But besides, riding the scalp of dandruff, Parisian Sage is guaranteed to stop falling hair and itching of the scalp. It keeps the scalp cool and clean in summer. It is a prime favorite with women of refinement.
It makes the hair soft, lustrous and beautiful in a week, and is not sticky
or greasy.

Deppingham selected and then vanished
as if into space.

"They say these Americans are a wonderful people, my lord," ventured Mr. Bowles. "I dare say when Mr.
and Mrs. Browne arrive they'll have some way of it."

"Browne!" cried her ladyship. "This very evening I shall give orders concerning the rooms they are to occupy.
I suppose, however, that the rooms
we have taken are the best?"

"The choicest, my lady," said
Bowles, bowing.

"See here, Mr.—er—old chap, don't you think you can induce the servants to come back to us? By Jove, I'll make it worth your while."

"What are we to do?" wailed Lady Agnes, sitting down suddenly upon the edge of a fountain.

"You see, my lady, they take the position that you have no right here," volunteered Bowles. "They've got the ridiculous idea into their noddies that you can't be the heiress unless Lord Deppingham passes away inside of a year, and—"

"I'm — if I do!" roared the perspiring obstacle. "I'm not so obliging as that, let me tell you. If it comes to that, what sort of ass do they think I'd be to come away out here to pass away? London's good enough for any man to die in."

"You are not going to die, Deppy,"
said his wife consolingly. "unless you starve to death," she supplemented,
with an expressive moue.

To be Continued.

Sage For Darkening the Hair.

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a soft "sage tea." When ever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time, tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the brew. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all have to do is to call for the ready made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy. This preparation is sold by all first-class druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

For sale and recommended by Hargrove & Mullin.

DIARRHOEA

There is no need of anyone suffering long with this disease, for to effect a quick cure it is only necessary to take a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy

In fact, in most cases one dose is sufficient. It never fails and can be relied upon in the most severe and dangerous cases. It is equally val-

of saving the lives of many children
each year.

In the world's history no medicine

RELIABILITY TEST
FOR AUTOMOBILESGlidden Tour Starts From Detroit Today.

Detroit, July 12.—The sixth annual Glidden tour, known officially as the annual reliability contest of the American Automobile association, was started today from the Campus Martius in this city with all the ceremony that befits so notable an event in automobile history. A large and enthusiastic assemblage, headed by the city officials, was on hand to see the forty machines begin their tour of 2,637 miles.

The tour, which is primarily an endurance test of the cars engaged, will go by way of Chicago to Minneapolis,
to Omaha, thence to Denver, and return to Kansas City, where it will disband. The distance must be covered in fifteen days, exclusive of two days' rest in Minneapolis and two in Denver.

Owing to the rigid tests applied to the machines the Glidden tour is really a contest of manufacturers. They complete this year for three trophies—
the Glidden for touring cars, the Hower for runabouts and roadsters and the Detroit for the miniature tonneau type of car. In addition, there are a few noncontingent participants and the two official cars. An exceedingly close watch is kept on each contestant by all the others, and every flaw or default in the construction or running of the car is noted and penalized.

TO PREVENT WASTE.

Railroads to Participate In National Conservation Movement.

ADVICE SOUGHT FOR BY THEM

Joint Committee to Give Them Suggestions as to Practical Method of Putting Policies into Effect—Enormous Consumption of Steel and Timber by Railways.

A plan by which the railroads are to take part in the conservation movement is announced as the outgrowth of conferences and correspondence between representatives of the carriers
and the joint committee on conservation. Preliminary negotiations on the part of the railroads have been conducted by representatives of the American Railway Engineering and Maintenance of Way association. Attention was also given to the subject of conservation at the recent meeting of the American Railway Master Mechanics' association at Atlantic City, N. J. The great quantities of timber, iron and coal used by the transportation lines are the bond of interest between them and the conservationists.

The plan as outlined provides for a systematic arrangement by which the committee on conservation is to give the railroads suggestions as to the most practical method of putting conservation policies into effect. The railway men agree to carry out these suggestions. The conservation authorities have submitted a plan which is now in the hands of A. S. Baldwin, chief engineer of the Illinois Central railroad, who in a letter to the conservation committee says:

On account of the wide areas traversed
by the railroads and the great consumption by them of timber and fuel, with their enormous use of iron and steel products, it is believed that the most effectual assistance of the American Railway Engineering and Maintenance of Way association can be in directing the attention of railroad officials to the excessive wastefulness in the present methods of production of timber and fuel and the great importance of introducing economies in their use and consumption; also to the importance of economizing in the use of iron and steel products and the possibilities of preservation by protective coatings and otherwise.

With this end in view the railroad conservation committee has asked for specific suggestions as to the best methods that should be used by railroads in the prevention and control of forest fires. The conservation committee has presented an outline for this work and with it a statement showing the enormous loss of lumber through forest fires every year.

CAN'T ACCOUNT FOR THE CASH

Defaulting Fort Wayne Banker
Puzzled Over Shortage.

SOME OF IT IS A MYSTERY

Of the $7,800 Shortage Found in the Funds of the First National Bank at Fort Wayne, the Teller, Who Is Under Bond on an Embezzlement Charge, Is Unable to Give Any Account of $3,500—How the Trick Was Turned and How the Discovery of the Shortage Was Made.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 12.—Edward N. Detzer, until a few days ago paying teller of the First National bank, who has confessed the embezzlement of $7,800 of the funds of that institution, is something of a mystery.

To officials of the bank he has told how he spent part of the sum, but he declares emphatically that he does not know what he did with $3,500. That it did not go into his living seems self-evident. With his wife and only son he lived very quietly. His wife did all her own housework and the couple went out but little in society.

He had a salary of $1,700, and this, it is declared, was ample for all his household expenses. He owned his home and consequently had no rent to pay, and the interest on a $2,000 mortgage on the house would not make a very big inroad into his salary.

The fact remains, however, that the money is missing and that the defaulter himself declares that he cannot account for it. This portion of the affair is causing considerable speculation. Of the remainder of the embezzlement Detzer's speculations extended over a period of two years and he says that the sums were taken a little at a time. He concealed his thefts by exceptionally clever manipulation of three large accounts with local and outside banks and by rifling the packages of new currency which came from the treasury at Washington to be put into use by the bank.

Detzer was easily the most prominent bank clerk in the city. He was president of the Fort Wayne Institute of Banking, of which he was the prime organizer, and three weeks ago went as delegate for the local association to the national convention at Seattle. It was this trip which was his undoing. To cover his shortage while he was gone he credited a large local customer with deposits on the customer's pass book aggregating $9,200.

On the bank's books, however, he only credited the customer with a deposit of $1,400, the difference being the amount he was short. This pass book generally was never presented for balancing until about the 10th of the month. Detzer knew this and expected to return in time to again manipulate the books. However, the book was presented on July 2, the day before Detzer's return, and his embezzlement was discovered. He is now out on $5,000 bail awaiting the action of the federal grand jury in October.

JEALOUSY THE MOTIVE

Young Woman Shot From Roadside While Returning From Dance.

Waukegan, Ill., July 12.—While Miss Loretta Doyle and George Lybal were driving home from a dance, a would-be assassin fired five shots at the couple. The young woman is now lying at her home suffering from a serious wound in the leg where one of the bullets struck her.

Parents of both the young people are prominent. Shrouded as it is in mystery, jealousy upon the part of some unsuccessful suitor for Miss Doyle's hand is believed to have been the cause for the attempted murder. Lybal, and not his young girl companion, is thought to have been the real object of the attack.

New Move in Axtell Case.

Bloomington, Ind., July 12.—Attorneys for Harry A. Axtell, the former financier of this city who is serving a term of two years in the Michigan City prison for embezzlement, have filed a transcript of all the record in the famous case with the supreme court, and are now preparing the briefs to be included in the case. They expect the higher court to give an opinion at the October term, and say they are hopeful that the verdict will be an acquittal.

Violent Death of Fugitive.

Princeton, Ind., July 12.—Description received here leads to practically positive belief that the William James, colored, killed by Chief of Detectives Ryan at East St. Louis Tuesday, is the Willie James who escaped from the Gibson county jail here ten years ago after having been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of another colored man.

Richmond Has Hopes.

Richmond, Ind., July 12.—Confidence is expressed that the Richmond delegation to the state encampment of the Spanish-American War Veterans at South Bend, July 21-22, will be able to elect Frank C. Kibbey of Richmond department commander, and also secure the next encampment for this city.

JEROME OUT OF IT

For This Reason Harry Thaw Has Hopes of Today's Proceedings.

White Plains, N. Y., July 12.—The inquiry into the present mental state of Harry Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, was resumed today in the supreme court before Justice Mills. Thaw, as well as his counsel, and his mother and several other relatives who have taken up their residence here to attend the hearings are greatly pleased over the decision of Justice Gaynor denying the application for a change of venue to New York county. They build their hopes of the plaintiff's ultimate release from Matteawan on the fact that Justice Gaynor's decision removes District Attorney Jerome of New York, who has strenuously opposed Thaw's release, from the case as a direct factor. The case is now entirely in the hands of the state attorney general.

FIGHTING IN PERSIA HAS FINALLY BEGUN

Royalists Meet Nationalists Near the Capital.

Teheran, Persia, July 12.—The shah's troops, numbering more than a thousand, including a band of Cossacks commanded by Russians made an attack upon the united Nationalist forces under Siphadar and Sardarasad, Sunday morning, at a point fifteen miles from Teheran.

Although the Royalists shelled the Nationalists' position with four guns for two hours, they failed to dislodge the enemy. Two hundred of the Cossacks advanced to within half a mile of the Nationalists, keeping up a heavy fire with Maxim and quick-firers. The Nationalists replied at intervals with a single gun, dropping a number of shells among the Cossacks and compelling them to retire.

The Nationalists finally fell back a short distance to Dehshah, where, owing to the nature of the ground, the Royalists were unable to make use of their guns. The only report concerning casualties that reached Teheran was that eight of the Bakhtiaris were killed and twelve of the shah's men wounded. Reinforcements were continually dispatched from Teheran. The Nationalists in the city, who believe that the Royalists were defeated, are distributing arms for their followers. The legation quarters are considered comparatively safe, and consequently they are crowded with refugees from all parts of the city.

The Russians Advancing.

St. Petersburg, July 12.—According to advices received here, the Russian troops have arrived at Kazvin, eighty-six miles from Teheran.

NINE KILLED

Bloody Outcome of Attack by Mexican Outlaws on Party of Texans.

El Paso, Tex., July 12.—Nine Texas horse traders out of a party of ten were slain by Mexican outlaws, who attacked the traders' camp near Afton, Mexico, thirty-five miles west of here. The horse traders were driving 500 head of cattle from New Mexico into Texas, when near Afton they camped for the night. The outlaws, who evidently had been trailing the Texans, then made the attack. Only one of the ten horse traders escaped and he, although wounded, reached Afton and told the story of the killing of his nine companions.

Russian Mine Explosion.

Nezovka, Russia, July 12.—An explosion of gas occurred in the Makewka mine in the Don district. One hundred and fifty miners were working in the pit at the time. Rescuing parties, after difficult and dangerous work, succeeded in bringing most of the imprisoned men to the surface alive. One of the rescuers was overcome by gas fumes and fourteen of the miners were dead when found.

Didn't Long Enjoy Liberty.

Indianapolis, July 12.—Robert Hilderbrandt, twenty-eight years old, who escaped from the sheriff of Blackford county by jumping, handcuffed, through a window of a speeding train near Marion, Ind., Friday night, was arrested at Union station Sunday by a railroad detective. Hilderbrandt is wanted in Hartford City on a charge of larceny. He refused to say how he got rid of the handcuffs.

To Be Hanged Next Friday.

New Orleans, July 12.—The first legal execution in Louisiana for a crime carried out under the sign of the black hand will take place at Hahnville next Friday, when Leonardo Gebbia will be hanged for complicity in the murder of Walter Lamana, two years ago.

Good Record For South Bend.

South Bend, Ind., July 12.—The American Contractors' Resume for the last six months of building in fifty-two cities, compared with the same period in 1908, shows that South Bend is first, with an increase of 485 per cent gain.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 12.—Forty-five thousand visitors are in Los Angeles to attend the annual convention of the Benevolent Protective Order of

LOCAL ARTIST IS HIGHLY PRAISED

Ernest B. Foster Returns From the East to Teach at the Art Institute.

WON A PRIZE SCHOLARSHIP

Shows Intimate Knowledge of Dogwood and Pawpaw Blossoms— Gives Exhibit.

A number of Rushville people will be surprised, and at once pleased, to read of the unusual success which has attended the brief artistic career of Ernest B. Foster, formerly of Rushville. The Indianapolis Sunday Star had the following story of the young man and his work:

"Ernest B. Foster, an Indiana artist, who knows the Hoosier woods and flowergrown fields, has given expression to his talent in a display of especial interest to women, his exhibit having been set up in sculpture court at the Herron Art Institute. Mr. Foster is a native of Rush county, and it was in the Rush county woods where he gained intimate knowledge of the dogwood and pawpaw blossom, and in Rush county orchards learned of the dainty colorings of the appleblossom, and all of these and more he has effectively brought out in numerous ways in his art products. He was formerly a student in the institute's art school, and from there he went to the Pennsylvania school of Industrial Art, Philadelphia, where he won a prize scholarship. He is back to the Herron Institute again with his talent largely expanded, and a woman who likes to make her own home decorations can see the Foster display with much profit in the way of ideas.

"Mr. Foster goes in for original designs from plant life, in which he uses water colors and dyes to bring out the beauty in the flower of the dogwood, pawpaw, apple tree, dahlias and other blossoms, and he applies his ideas to screen panels, wall paper designs, flower boxes, mosaic floor borders, oil cloth, pillow tops, window curtains and numerous other home decorations in the making of which a woman finds delightful pastime. How to make a stencil and how to cut its design sharp and clean, how to blend colors, how to apply a design of flower, or design of one color to a half dozen different shades of background, are pleasingly set out in the Foster exhibit. The artist will join the teaching force of the art school on July 19 for the summer."

FAKE OIL FIELD BROUGHT TO LIFE

Buena Vista Skeleton is Paraded in a Civil Suit in the Circuit Court.

EXPOSE OF A GET-RICH-QUICK

The Stone-Day case was heard by a jury and Judge Hanna at the special session of the circuit court today. The case grew out of a suit on a note. The note was given for stock in the Buena Vista oil fields (?). It will be remembered that a chap named M. J. O'Connell salted some territory near Buena, pouring several barrels of crude oil in a well and causing excitement galore in that otherwise tranquil neighborhood. Stock was sold right and left and some Rushville parties gobbled on to some beautiful, green certificates with dreams and visions of big returns.

one clause in the law, any other like material, and from this he decided that it was not the intent of the legislators to pave city streets under the Three Mile law. In his decision he upheld the county board of commissioners in their action and said that they were limited to the use of gravel, macadam, or any other like material, and it was not within their power to pave with brick, when this did not come within their jurisdiction. He said it was unnecessary to consider the constitutional question raised. The commissioners turned down the petitioners on the ground of the constitutionality of the law and Judge Hanna in his decision did not touch on this point.

There was some talk about a compromise in the street paving case today among the attorneys, and some of the prominent petitioners and remonstrators. It is planned to construct the street under the same statute but in a different manner. To have the city and township combine on the payment of the improvement, to pay the cost of macadam and the abutting property owners to pay the difference between macadam and brick pavement. This sum, it is said, would be very small. The street could be improved with macadam under the Three Mile law and all opposition would be fruitless and futile.

PLAYS PIANO MANY HOURS

State Champion is Employed at the Local Vaude Theater.

Chester Worth, a champion long-distanced piano player, has been employed by the local Vaude theater to play there regularly beginning tonight. Worth attracted State-wide attention when he played continuously at Plainfield, Indiana, from six o'clock one evening until seven o'clock the following morning. It is estimated that he struck over one million keys in that time.

Syria and Palestine have an inordinate appetite for imported drugs. In Beirut, a city where soft drinks are in great demand, there is not a single soda fountain.

He gave his name as A. S. Johnson, but gave Mr. Sammons to understand it was none of his business where he lived or what he did. Sammons took him to the Ray Hotel, where he closely questioned him, but gained nothing that would incriminate.

The trail Sammons was pursuing had scarcely grown cold when Chief of Police Marsh and Officer Jackson appeared, and for seven hours one of the most rigid sweatings man was ever subjected to in Shelbyville was given Johnson. From eleven o'clock Sunday until six in the evening Johnson was under the seathing fire of the officers, but not once did he evince a tremor or contradict himself in his answers.

After Sammons left Johnson at about eight o'clock, it is alleged, he entered a closet in the hotel. In this closet, on search instituted at the behest of the officers at eleven o'clock, was found a set of skeleton keys, a jeweler's scales and tools. Johnson denied having placed them there and stoutly proclaimed his innocence. Ernest Metcalf, formerly associated with the Democrat, and who roomed over the News office, says Johnson is the same fellow who robbed Dr.

White's office the time other dental parlors were entered.

Dr. Sparks, a Rushville dentist, was telephoned, and his description of the thief who robbed his office a day or two after the local parlors were visited, tallied almost identically with Johnson's. At Rushville, the thief who robbed Dr. Sparks' office, roomed at the boarding house kept by Mrs. Hatfield. An hour after the theft was committed he and his wife and child left the place, leaving an unpaid board bill. Mrs. Hatfield came to Shelbyville late Sunday evening and picked Johnson from a group of six.

"Can you pick the man who boarded with you in Rushville, Mrs. Hatfield?" Chief Marsh asked. "Be careful and don't make any mistakes."

Mrs. Hatfield carefully scrutinized the faces of the six men, stationed herself in front of Johnson, and exclaimed, as she pointed her finger at him, "There is the fellow who owes me that board bill."

Johnson did not wince and not a tremor of excitement passed over him. He said he did not know Mrs. Hatfield.

Mrs. Hatfield said Johnson was known as DeHorn, or a name similar, and that in Rushville he had a wife and child. Johnson states he was never married and consequently has no family.

Notwithstanding Johnson said he was a traveling salesman he had no samples or cards. He has no papers in his possession by which the officers could establish his identity.
